Way of the Wives.

Men in Maine who have been married to two or more wives—at different times, of course—claim that wives, who are forever car or train, who forget to take their shopping bag from the lunch room or from the waiting room, who borrow their husband's fountain pen and leave it on board a boat or a train—all these deliciously eccentric and surprising wives are becoming less pronounced in their eccentricities than they were before rapid and frequent trains and steamboats began to vex the State with their noise and smoke.

It seems as if a natural man or woman —he or she—remembers in proportion to how much he or she is compelled to remember. Memory is more a matter of practice, than it is a gift. Seldom does a human being who lives upon earth, have the perfect memory that was possessed by the late Lord Macaulay.
At and before the time printing from types was invented there were scores of men and women who could repeat the entire Bible from memory. This great accomplishment came from long and patient study, applied over terms of years. Books have been filled with the memorizing feats of famous actors and actresses in modern times, many of which are truly remarkable.

Memory is a most elusive mistress to follow. Most all depends upon the amount and intensity of the study that is employed.

What are called "forgetful wives" are not freaks or weak-minded. They are either out of practice, or have never had a chance to practice at all. Men and associations, who advertise to equip such of us as forget easily with what they term "perfect memories" should have their statements accepted, if accepted at all, with a sizable grain of salt.
It is reasonably certain that any party who will pay out money to advertise his own method of memorizing, has some basis of fact besides the claim. How much depends upon the man who advertises, and upon his method.

A rule, however, the art of memorizing depends upon close and faithful study. The world of today has small use for the man or woman, who is impersonally saying as a schoolboy complaint, the tedious old formula—"I forget."

The man or the woman who forgets, as a rule, is a back number. [Bargor

WOODSTOCK.

E. O. Bean shot a fine deer this week.
Mrs. Scott Merrill of Norway, visited at Dudley Cottage, Sunday.

Several good lots of apples in this locality waiting apple buyers.

Mrs. Nellie Dudley, who visited at West Paris and vicinity last week, returned home, Monday.

We observed that Mr. Gore Schoolhouse was brilliantly lighted one night this week and upon inquiry, we learned that the teacher had several lamps put into the schoolhouse for the use of the school, these short days.

From Old Man's Gray Matter.

If there is anything that tries a man's soul it is a chair that is all worn out and which threatens to fall at each using time. A man will put up with a rickety chair longer than anything else in the world.

Paraphrase. If some men could play baseball as well as they jolly over the phone, Ty Cobb wouldn't be in it for a minute.

Cookies are good medicine if the right girl makes them. Anyway, "the right girl" is generally a good sort of doctor in all things besides the old-fashioned cookies.

Everybody to his dad. Some people are always seen at funerals who never knew the deceased even by sight, and they cry with the utmost ease.

When someone tells a man that he is smart, how the thrill runs up and down his backbone, and he then really thinks he is.

Old maids are the salt of the earth, many times, but there are those who think they run the earth. These are the kind who are so disagreeable when they get to be real aged old maids, because they found it was all a mistake—this running the universe.

If a girl were as homely as a carload of slabs, and she had a pretty head, she has enough capital to set the river on fire every time. A round, warm shoulder can make or break kingdoms.

The girl who won't wear underclothes in winter, when her good mother tries to induce her to do so, is following a dangerous rule that flimsy society lays down. The mother knows best. Such a girl is the object of goo-goo eyes from the undertaker.

About everybody who works for a big firm has the idea that the firm's cash box is a legitimate proposition for depletion. The trouble with some very good workmen is that they think the firm they work for is a mercantile Monte Cristo.

A young woman who is not very careful about what her sweetheart thinks is very apt to lose cash with every good sweetheart who comes along. [Manchester an acre of Northern flint corn, grown on this farm by E. M. Pierce, the super-

A Doer.

So you want a position in my firm? said the fat man with the thick gold chain. Well, what were you in your last job?

A doer, sir, answered the sad-eyed applicant.

What's that? asked the employer.

Well, sir, said the sad-eyed one. I was the doer, and the rest were the takers. When my gov'nor wanted a thing done he would tell the cashier, the cashier would tell it to the bookkeeper, the bookkeeper would tell it to his assistant, his assistant would tell it to the chief clerk, and the chief clerk would tell it to me.

And what would happen then?

Well, sir, replied the sad-eyed applicant, as I hadn't anyone to mention it to, I'd—do it.

BRYANT POND.

Edwin Andrews.
Edwin Andrews died early Thursday morning after an illness of only four days. For some years he had been in poor health, but he had kept on paying close attention to his affairs and was considered one of the most stirring business men of the town.

He was born in Woodstock about 48 years ago and was the son of the late Jesse Andrews of East Woodstock. Previous to his coming to this town he had run a general store at Milton Plantation and was for a short time in the grain trade at Rumford Falls.

Some eleven years ago he purchased the old Lyman Bolster store, then owned by the Bartlett heirs, and engaged him in the general trade, doing also quite an extensive business in grain and flour. He was a member of Jefferson Lodge of Masons.

Besides an aged mother he leaves a widow and three children, William Andrews of South Woodstock.

The funeral was held at the residence, Saturday afternoon, the service being conducted by Rev. J. H. Little of Bethel. Burial in Riverside cemetery at South Paris.

Edwin Andrews was well known in this vicinity as a merchant, grain dealer and keeper of a livery stable. Few people could be missed in a community as he will be, for the reason that he never turned a deaf ear to any one who was in trouble and asked him for help, and many times he would take the pains to find out who the needy ones were, and there are many people whose home town who truly say, "He was the best friend I ever had." It will never be known how many heavy hearts he has lightened by the ever ready sympathy which was manifested in his daily life.

As a son it was one wish to lighten the descending path of his aged mother, Mrs. Rachel Edwards of South Woodstock, and while she sits by the window in her little cottage, as was her wont, and watches for her boy who will never come again, she has the beautiful assurance that the last thought of her comfort was foremost in his mind.

C. F. Farrar is assisting in setting Mann's boiler in the Milton factory.

Every other day comes a report that the Rumford stage route is no more.

Mrs. Edward Thompson expects to spend the winter in West Virginia.

Two more can be added to the list of auto ownership in Woodstock. George L. Cushman and H. Alton Bacon have been to market and purchased.

Constable Arkett has returned from a two weeks' stay in the Wild River region. He reports that there is quite an inquiry for bears in that section.

Joseph Thirrow, who has resided for several years in the house on the H. H. Cushman farm, is now employed by Dana C. Dudley and has moved to the Dudley farm.

Charles G. Hill is working in the Dearborn Spool Mill.

E. J. Thompson's three cows strayed away Monday and they couldn't find them at night. Two of them he had lately bought, and they were not familiar with the landscape. On a very rainy night and Tuesday forenoon after it cleared away they were found in the bog two of them drowned in the brook, one they think will live.

More Board of Trade Talk.

Many of the citizens in town are taking an interest in the proposition of forming a local board of trade, but there are many more who do not understand what the object of such an organization is, and the work would be some. Some think, judging from its name that it is simply an organization of the traders of a town and that other citizens, these following other lines of business would not be included. Others believe that because the town is small the board of organization could accomplish little and that instead of working together for the common good, we should all be pulling apart and that everything would soon go to smash.

Of course every citizen has a right to his own opinion on any question, but we sincerely believe and hope that these citizens who have no faith that anything can be accomplished here, at Bryant Pond because there may be obstacles in the way or because conditions are not right, are very much mistaken. It is doubtful if any work of the kind was ever undertaken in any community but there were obstacles and conditions to be met and overcome. Human nature is very much the same in all towns and we for one party believe that the citizenship of Woodstock are just as good as in the towns about us.

We have every reason to believe that the majority of the citizens in our town are interested in its welfare and want to see it advance in progress and prosperity. The board of trade has proven itself one of the best means for the citizens to work together and do that public work and take up public questions which could not or would not be accomplished without united effort. There are some seventy towns in

The First Thanksgiving.

Peculiarly an American institution is Thanksgiving as we know it—a day of feasting and merrymaking—a holiday in every sense of the word. And thus are we in danger of losing sight of the primary purpose for which it was originally appointed, a day set apart in which to give thanks to God for his mercies and bounty.

The first Thanksgiving in North America was observed with religious solemnity in the year 1578 on the shores of Newfoundland. In 1607 the Sopham colony, who settled at Sagadahoc on the Maine coast, similarly observed a day in which to offer up thanks.

But the origin of Thanksgiving as a national festival as well as a living thanks, dates back to the early days of the Plymouth colony when in 1621 the men of Plymouth had gathered their crops from twenty acres of corn and sixty acres of barley and peas. There was also great abundance of game, and the little colony felt that it had much to be thankful for. Therefore, Gov. Bradford directed that the 13th of December be observed as a special day in which to give thanks and to feast. Thus quaintly does Edward Winslow describe the preparations:

"Our harvest being gathered in, our governor sent four men on a fowling, so that we might after a special manner rejoice together after we had gathered the fruit of our labors. They four killed in one day as much fowl as with a little help besides, served the company all most a week. At which time, among other recreations, we exercised our arms, many of the Indians coming amongst us, and among the rest their great king, Massasoit, with some ninety of his men, whom for three days we entertained and feasted; and they (the Indians) went out and killed five deer, which they bestowed on our governor, and upon our captain (Standish) and others; and although it be not always so plentiful as it was at this time with us, yet by the goodness of God we are so far from want that in our winter wish you were partakers of our plenty."

The feast was partaken of by fifty-five English and Indians. There were but four women in the colony and these with the assistance of one servant and some young girls, prepared the food for three days of feasting for 120 men of whom three-fourths were Indians.

Maine now that have local boards of trade and new boards are rapidly being formed.

Bethel and Brownfield being the latest towns in Oxford County to form such organizations. The board of trade movement probably originated by the merchants organizing for their mutual benefit but the work has so broadened out that now most of the boards include all of the citizens who are interested in the towns' welfare, farmers, workingmen, manufacturers, professional men and all who want to help improve their own town.

The president of the Newport board of trade for many years was a farmer and Newport is a town where the farmers and village folks have pulled together for the good of their town and have accomplished things. Why cannot Woodstock do the same? The size of the town is no argument against having a board of trade for there are in Maine, smaller towns than Woodstock that have active organizations. All that is needed for us to wake up a little more to our opportunities all about us, take account of stock and then go ahead little by little to develop, improve and beautify our village and town.

There are questions constantly arising that need attention, that are of interest to the whole town, and unless these problems are solved intelligently it means back ward steps for our town. There is the telephone question, fire protection, taxes, roads and bridges, hotel and numerous other things that claim our attention and here the work of the board of trade would come in. We could get together at our monthly meetings and discuss these questions, and we could take such actions as we thought best in regard to them. We could appoint committees to look into these questions and make their reports at the regular or special meetings.

The possibilities of our town are unlimited. The resources are here. It is our duty and privilege to make the best possible use of them both for ourselves and those who are to follow. By working together for the things we want we can each have more than we possibly could by pulling apart. Let us think about these questions.

Most of us intend to always make our homes here, and who is there in this good old town of Woodstock who does not feel that it is one of the best towns in Maine today? Then isn't it up to us, one and all to do everything in our power to keep it so, to ever seek its advancement in every legitimate way?

The writer may be mistaken, but he believes that an organization of the business men of the town, traders, farmers, manufacturers and all into a local board of trade, to take up and deal with local questions as they confront us, is what is most needed in Woodstock today.

This is no wild dream. Other towns all about us are doing these very things. If we cannot do the same here, it would be because we are not so intelligent as the people of other towns and no loyal Woodstocker believes that.

Then let us talk this question up with our citizens and take such action as seems for the best interest of the town. It is up to us.

Christmas Fruit Cake.

One pound of flour, one pound of sugar, one and one-eighth pounds butter, one-half pound candied citron, four pounds currants, four pounds raisins, one and one-half cups of molasses, one teaspoonful each of nutmeg, cinnamon, cloves, 3 gills boiled cider. Beat sugar and butter to a cream; add eggs well beaten, flour and spices, well sifted together, and last, the fruit.

"Now let me tell you something. Whenever you want to heat up rolls again, you don't want to put 'em in the oven. You want to put 'em in the double boiler. That'll keep 'em fresh and moist. Of course you put water in the lower part. You can leave 'em stand as long as you've a mind to, and they'll be hot and they won't be all died up neither."

A tack points heavenward when it means most mischief. It has many of human imitations.
